

Becky Williams

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

Informational poster featuring a portrait of a man.

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

Informational poster featuring a geometric fabric pattern.

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

Informational poster featuring a mannequin wearing a fabric piece.

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

Informational poster featuring an abstract fabric pattern.

Using contemporary trends, historical references and sustainable styles, students have merged traditional craft processes with digital technologies to create distinctive textiles.

Environmentally friendly processes include hand & machine-drawn silkscreened printing and needle-knitting.

Using recycled materials and responsible fabrics there is low waste and low energy consumption which sets out mass production techniques as well as ethical consumption, fashion & wearing treatments.

Betsy Williams & C.U.T.S.

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

University of Bolton
Textile & Surface Design

C.U.T.S.

...with the help of...

Environmentally friendly processes include hand & machine stitching, digital transfer printing and needle-free bonding.

Using natural materials or recycled fabrics from the waste and low energy consumption along with old mass production techniques as well as chemical treatments, fashion & washing treatments.

Handmade
Embroidery
Vintage Clasp
and Materials
Terryquary
Christina

