Leisure in Britain 1919 - 1939
Module No. HIS3035

Answer TWO questions.

1. It has been claimed (Stevenson , 1984) that the growth of leisure in the inter-war period was “part of the development of a more uniform and homogeneous society, partaking of an increasingly common culture”. Using illustrative examples, critically appraise this statement.

2. In the inter war period many critics saw leisure to have a crucial role in the creation of a new society. In what ways was leisure thought to be important in promoting social and political change?

3. Critically assess the ways in which leisure both reproduced and challenged gender differences in inter-war British society.

4. Critically analyse the ways in which sport reflected class distinctions in inter-war Britain.
