Aims of the programme

The principal aims of the programme are:

To provide access to legal education to a diverse student body.

To develop academic and professional skills in order to allow for an opportunity to study at higher levels and enhance career development

To enhance the employability of students by developing appropriate transferable and legal skills.

To extend the intellectual and evaluative skills of participants and facilitate the development of processes of creative thought.

To develop skills necessary for the investigation of legal problems.

To develop a positive disposition towards, and the skills for, life long learning.

To develop transferable skills for use in the workplace

Distinctive features of the programme

The foundation year allows you to gain not just a working knowledge of the legal system in England and Wales but also provides you with the skills relevant to the study of law. This knowledge gained and the legal skills acquired in the foundation year should hold you in good stead for the first year of the LLB programme.

Your study will be based on the requirements defined by the Joint Academic Stage Board (JASB) which represents the Solicitors Regulation Authority and the Bar Standards Board for the initial or academic stage of training to practise in the legal profession. The JASB is responsible for making sure that all Qualifying Law Degrees meet a nationally recognised standard. By this means, all Bachelor of Laws degrees are of an equivalent standing. At Bolton we are gratified that our law degree meets that high national standard.

You will establish your knowledge and understanding of the doctrines and principles which underpin the law of England and Wales. You will learn about the sources of the law, how it is made and developed, the institutions within which that law is administered and the personnel who practice law.

You will learn a wide range of legal concepts, values, principles and rules of English law and how to explain the relationship between them in a number of particular areas.

You will develop the intellectual and practical skills needed to research and analyse the law from primary resources on specific matters and to apply the findings of such work to the solution of legal problems. You will also develop your ability to communicate these findings, both orally and in writing, in a manner that is appropriate to the needs of a variety of audiences.

Few law schools have their own dedicated court room. The Law Team at Bolton is now very proud of its new court facilities as recently opened by Sir Ernest Ryder, High Court Judge and presiding Judge for the North Circuit. This is designed to hone the forensic skills of our law students so as to enable them to gain professional skills whilst perusing the academic stage of a law degree.

The court room is also an excellent venue for guest speakers. One of the main purposes of the guest speakers is to help keep our students cognisant of the latest changes in the profession and in the job market generally.

In addition, in Law, work shadowing opportunities are offered to undergraduates.

Law has its own dedicated section in the library as well as a specialised law librarian.

Our students are kept in touch with professional developments thanks to guest speakers.

In addition, the Professionals in Practice Course is designed to help our students gain an understanding of the world of work.

Learning and teaching strategies.

A range of teaching and learning methods is deployed on the programme. These include: lectures, seminars, tutorials, workshops, technology enhanced applications, moots, debates, role plays and student presentations. In the majority of modules, formal lectures are used for the formal dissemination of information and to introduce students to a topic. The lectures are followed by small group seminars during which students are required to undertake a variety of tasks, many of which involve the student applying his/her knowledge and understanding of a topic to case studies, which are based on a range of legal problems. Additional tutorials are available on a weekly basis and provide an opportunity for students to seek clarification of issues arising from lectures and seminar activities.

Assessment strategy

The assessment strategy for the programme is designed to ensure that students achieve the overall aims and learning outcomes of the programme, as well as the learning outcomes for individual modules.

A range of summative assessment methods is used on the programme including, essays, reports, presentations, portfolios, viva voce and examinations. Use is also made of formative assessment in order to promote student learning; methods used in this respect include tutorial questions based on exam type scenarios with detailed feedback provided. This allows students to develop their intellectual capabilities, as well as key transferable skills.

Written feedback on assignments is provided to students using a grid, which meets the requirement of the 2007 Law Benchmarks. Each key area is further subdivided and students receive an indication of how well they have performed in each area, in addition to receiving specific feedback on their performance. This approach to feedback identifies for each student areas of weakness and is instrumental in enabling students to view feedback on assignments as a learning process. Feedback on performance on examinations is also available following the relevant Assessment Board.

Assessment regulations

Assessment Regulations for Undergraduate Modular Programmes (Variations to the University Regulations for the LLB(Hons) with Qualifying Law Degree Status)

Grade Bands and classifications

Undergraduate Honours Degrees

Grade Description	Mark %	Honours Degree Classification
Work of exceptional quality	70+	i
Work of very good quality	60-69	ii.i
Work of good quality	50-59	ii.ii

Work of satisfactory quality	40-49	iii
Borderline fail	35-39
Fail	Below 35

Honours classification

You will normally be awarded the honours classification resulting from the application of either Rule ACM20 or Rule ACM6.

Rule ACM20

A weighted average of the marks from modules worth a total of 200 credits at Levels HE5 and HE6 combined, including the marks from modules worth no more than 80 credits at least at Level HE5 (weighted 30 percent) and marks from modules worth at least 120 credits at Level HE6 (weighted 70 percent), which represent the best marks achieved by you at those Levels.

Where the average falls unequivocally into one of the following bands: 48.00 - 49.99, 58.00 - 59.99, 68.00 - 69.99; and you have achieved marks clearly in an honours classification category higher than their average for modules worth at least 110 credits, then you will be awarded an honours degree in the classification category one higher than that indicated by your average.

Rule ACM6 (an alternative if you do not have sufficient marks at Levels HE5 and 6 to apply ACM20)

A simple average of the equally weighted marks from modules worth 120 credits at Level HE6 which represent the best marks achieved by you at that Level.

Where the average falls unequivocally into one of the following bands: 48.00 – 49.99, 58.00 – 59.99, 68.00 – 69.99; and you have achieved marks clearly in an honours classification category higher than their average for modules worth at least 70 credits, then you will be awarded an honours degree in the classification category one higher than that indicated by their average.

Where you have marks available for fewer than 120 credits at Level HE6, honours classification shall normally be based solely on a simple average of the available marks for modules at Level HE6, subject to there being marks for a minimum of 60 credits awarded by the University. Upgrading of the honours classification will not normally be available where there are marks available for fewer than 120 credits at Level HE6, unless this is explicitly approved.
