

Research Methods and Statistical Data Analysis for Postgraduate Research Students

If you need to study research methods and/or statistical data analysis you should first discuss your precise needs with your supervisor, who should also be able to direct you to potential modules from your own subject area. A sample of such modules is shown below, but bear in mind that there will be others – those below just happen to have ‘research’ as the first word of the module title and you need to look at them to see if they include coverage of the methods and tools you may need, e.g. computerised data analysis packages such as SPSS. In addition, the University’s Module Database contains details of every module from across all of the University’s taught programmes; see http://data.bolton.ac.uk/academicaffairs/view_modulelist.asp?sort=code.
