Other requirements depending on your personal circumstances:

If you have separated from your partner or spouse: You will need to provide evidence of this as you may if you were applying for benefits or your core funding from Student Finance England. This can be done by providing a copy of your decree absolute, decree nisi or a letter from a solicitor. A copy of your tax credits document, Housing Benefit entitlement letter, rent or mortgage agreement or utility bill(s) that are in your name only and do not mention your ex-partner will also be required to support your application. You may be asked to provide more than one single piece of evidence as proof of single status. If you cannot provide sufficient evidence to be treated as a single applicant and your application to the fund cannot progress then you will be notified of this in writing.

If you have rent or mortgage arrears: You will need to provide the most recent bill confirming the outstanding amount to be paid on the property owned/rented by either yourself or your spouse. This cannot include arrears accrued prior to you becoming a student on your current course of study.

If you have arrears with a utility company and your services are at risk of being disconnected: You will need to provide evidence confirming the amount owed to a utility company in the form of the most recent bill. Even though you may be in arrears the service in question might not be at risk of being disconnected, therefore, it is important you provide evidence that shows the service is at risk of being disconnected. This cannot include arrears accrued prior to you becoming a student on your current course of study.

If you have Council Tax arrears and you are at risk of being taken to Court: You will need to provide evidence regarding this in the form of a recent bill confirming the amount and also evidence regarding court proceedings. This cannot include arrears accrued prior to you becoming a student on your current course of study.

Please tick all the boxes that apply to you and the evidence you have submitted with your application form, then sign this form below confirming that you believe that your application is complete and is ready to be assessed. You should also understand that any incomplete application will be returned through the normal mail delivery system.
