The University of Bolton is investing significantly in its Mental Health care and Wellbeing services for students by improving service provision and by educating staff and students to raise awareness. This new role is a key addition to Student Services and the Life Lounge and its introduction compliments the department's current working practices and proposed development of new initiatives. The changes being made at The University of Bolton will improve the way in which students' access services and will offer better support to students and for staff who have regular contact with students.

The University of Bolton Student Services department opened the Life Lounge in September 2015 and received Customer Service Excellence Plus for the initiative. The Life Lounge provides students with access to a Counselling service, Cognitive Behavioural Therapy Service delivered by postgraduate students under the management/supervision of qualified academics from the School of Education and Psychology and a Mental Health Advisor service. The University of Bolton is looking to expand on this service provision by the creation of two new posts in the Life Lounge, the Wellbeing Coordinator and Wellbeing Advisor alongside the recruitment of another Student Counsellor and CBT Therapist. Successful candidates will be working closely with professional colleagues and other specialist staff including but not limited to Disability Advisors, Student Funding Advisor and the Accommodation Team.

The creation of the new roles responds to the increased demand for mental health services and the increased complexity in regards to student support, particularly, at times, in regard to mental health. The Wellbeing Coordinator supported by a Wellbeing Advisor will take forward the coordination of specialist support professionals and will lead with the administrative tasks these staff currently undertake allowing them greater time to dedicate to supporting students.

For both the Wellbeing Coordinator and Advisors post the successful candidates will be required to have excellent interpersonal and organisational skills together with experience of supporting individuals with poor Mental Health obtained from working in large organisations such as Universities, Further Education Colleges, Social Services or the NHS.

The Wellbeing Coordinator position will be subject to an Enhanced DBS Check.

The successful candidate will be working with a diverse student body in a widening participation university. In order to meet the needs of the University and Student Services, a flexible approach to working patterns/hours is an essential requirement of this role.
